DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 – 4, 6 – 10, 12 – 13, 15, 17 – 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. patent 6,421,782 to Yanagisawa et al in view of U.S. patent 6,192,230 to Van Bokhorst et al.

Yanagisawa et al teaches providing an add-in card w/out a MAC to provide wake packet filtering. See col 7 lines 11 – 13: “the WOL function is achieved by inserting a WOL capable LAN adapter card into a bus slot on the computer’s main body (motherboard)”. Yanagisawa et al does not however teach this to implement a wireless communication system. Van Bokhorst et al teaches a power saving system wherein the wake state is implemented only when necessary. Van Bokhorst et al also discusses the problem in the wireless art that “The power saving function is thus seen to be a complex procedure, involving the exchange of polling and response packets for each individual station, which results in inefficient use of the wireless communication medium”.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have applied the teachings of Yanagisawa et al to a wireless network, in light of the teachings of Van Bokhorst et al, in order to save battery consumption.

It is noted that Yanagisawa et al teaches the use of a bus and controller in figure 2.

It is further noted that it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have implemented Yanagisawa in software in order to insure the processes repeatability.

3. Claims 5, 11, 14, 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. patent 6,421,782 to Yanagisawa et al in view of U.S. patent 6,192,230 to Van Bokhorst et al as applied above to claims 1 – 4, 6 – 10, 12 – 13, 15, 17 – 20, and further in view of U.S. patent 6,698,654 to Zuppichich.

Yanagisawa et al/Van Bokhorst teach the invention as described above but do not teach interfacing the card through the use of matching signals (identifiers) and the use of subsequent write information. This is taught in Zuppichich. See col 2 lines 60+.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have provided Yanagisawa et al/Van Bokhorst with an automatic interfacing means in light of the teachings of Zuppichich in order to provide a correct circuit in an effective manner.

4. Applicants remarks are moot in view of the new grounds of rejection.
